TWO INDICTED IN MURDER

Speedy Trial Promised in Bronx Killing of Detective

Two men were indicted yesterday by the Bronx grand jury for first degree murder. They were charged with killing Detective James Burke in the hold-up of a Bronx liquor store Dec. 13.

The defendants, Cornelius Moore, 34 years old, of 617 West 136th Street, and Leslie Haughton, 24, of 741 Jennings Street, the Bronx, were arraigned later in Bronx County Court and remanded by Judge Harry Stackell. District Attorney Samuel J. Foley said there would be a "speedy trial."

The two prisoners were caught after a chance remark by a burglary suspect had set detectives on the trail. Both men, police said, confessed taking part in the hold-up. Moore, it was said, admitted that he had shot Detective Burke seven times when the latter balked the hold-up in Ray's Wine and Liquor Store, 1439 Webster Avenue.
