

You were there. We want to hear your story.

The NYPD is currently in pre-production of a feature-length documentary which acknowledges and honors NYPD members (active and retired) who have suffered or are suffering from 9/11-related illnesses. The film will tell the stories of these first responders and their families through a combination of interviews, historic and contemporary stock footage, home video, and related contextual video.

This film will depict the true cost of the 9/11 attacks – which members of the NYPD and other first responders will continue to pay for years to come – and expose the immense scope of the 9/11-related illness crisis. The intended result will be a candid, comprehensive, and clear representation of all that the WTC attack has wrought since 9/11/01, and how it continues to shape the lives (and deaths) of NYPD members going forward. In this way, we will help ensure that they, too, are never forgotten.

Additionally, a website will be created to provide further information, including testimonials, medical resources, contact points, and more.

To do this, we are asking you to share – and help us tell – your story.

To inquire about participation in this project, contact either of the following:

Kayla Coughlin

Program Producer, DCPI | (646) 610-4428 | kayla.coughlin@nypd.org

John Giretti

Detective, DCPI | (646) 610-8441 | john.giretti@nypd.org

NYPD

New York City
Police Foundation
Invest in a Safe City

